

Diane Kortus Bio

Diane is the Culture and Inclusion Manager with ConAgra Foods. She is responsible for executing a comprehensive strategy for the Culture and Inclusion team around Employee Resource Networks and External Partnerships. ConAgra Foods is currently one of the largest food manufacturers in North America with a portfolio that includes Healthy Choice®, Hebrew National®, Hunt's®, Marie Callendar's®, Orville Redenbacher's®, and Alexia® as well as many of the private label brands from your favorite stores.

Diane strategically coaches and leads 7 Employee Resource Networks (ERNs) comprised of 33 neighborhoods across the United States and Canada. Diane holds a Bachelor's Degree in Education from University of Nebraska at Omaha, and a Master's Degree from Bellevue University in Organizational Performance as well as a certification as an HBDI (Herrmann Brain Dominance Instrument) Practitioner and Facilitator.

Diane is passionate about developing leaders by elevating leader capability. Within ConAgra Foods she champions using the ERNs as the experiential learning platform for true impact on the culture and the business. External to ConAgra Foods, she serves on several boards both locally and national to advocate for Hispanic communities and to systemically and collectively advance women into the leadership pipeline. Most recently she birthed Ecosystem Evolution – Women in Leadership, a comprehensive strategy for behavior change management impacting several Omaha corporations.
